

A Report on Postcolonialism

Pak Ho Ryol

Postcolonialism can be interpreted as “ideas after colonialism.” These ideas include visible or invisible phenomena according to the viewpoint that colonialism and imperialism still exist in the world today.

This report will investigate the violent characteristics of colonialism as a theory-practice challenge by carefully examining how colonial rules have been established and how discriminatory structures have been created.

Keywords: discourse, orientalism, binary opposition, colony responsibility, monument, world heritage, Koreans in Japan, hate speech, history revisionism, identity
