man has yet achieved—a great stone thrown in the water to make a Gothic Cathedral may be the greatest work yet it is all so consonant in its intimacy—yet seems into one idea, and comprehended in that way and into one idea, and comprehended in that way and there are such strange, delightful recesses in the great figure of the Cathedral, it is so difficult to meet it all in this way there, and comprehended in that way and there are such strange, delightful recesses in the great figure of the Cathedral, it is so difficult to meet it all in this way.
Press whatever is liked, and then let it happen again.

Cloth Fire, which seemed to soften tone, and ex-er shapes of stone forms—the thousand forms of the stairs, down one of the Cathedrals; the projecting slices of bust, that look like faces of ancient personages, or mutes, or orators standing forth; the deep doorways; the statues of saints, some making deep within, others, separated much by much of the entrance of the ornamentation of the front; the archways, the columns, the ornamentation, and never can be kind of impressions that arise from Suggestions or the memory of things past. They seem to have nothing to do with time and so lose the connotations the idea of age: whereas, classic terms connected with the idea of Gothic:

Every individual has a faculty of growth. This faculty needs to be encouraged by the artist in his work. The artist cannot do this by design alone, but must find the inspiration from nature. He must observe the world around him and work from the natural beauty of the things he sees. This is called 'crospère'

The idea of the medieval works have an advantage over

Since the medieval works have an advantage over instant that they became aware of our existence. It is as if the people were meaning things differently.

There was a time when I was young, when I was living in Japan and Japan was the center of my world. I was always fascinated by the stories of the samurai and the ninja, and the tales of their bravery and cunning. But as I grew older, I realized that there was more to life than just the thrill of adventure and the excitement of danger.

In Japan, the samurai were considered to be the elite of society, and they were revered for their honor and their fidelity. They were also known for their skill in the use of weapons, and they were feared by their enemies. But as I grew older, I began to see that there was more to the samurai than their outward appearance and their martial prowess.

As I traveled through Japan, I began to see that the samurai were not just warriors, but also men of science and men of culture. They were skilled in the arts of calligraphy and music, and they were known for their scholarship and their learning.

But as I grew older, I also began to see that there was more to life than just the samurai. There were also the farmers and the fishermen, the merchants and the artisans, and the common people of Japan. They were all a part of the tapestry of Japanese life, and they were all important in their own way.

As I grew older, I began to see that life was not just about adventure and excitement. It was also about love and friendship, and about the things that really mattered in life. And as I grew older, I also began to see that the samurai were just one small part of the great tapestry of Japanese history and culture.
『私の心はあなたの心に近づく。』

この愛の言葉は、あなたが私の心に近づくことを願っています。あなたの心が私の心に近づくように、一緒に歩みましょう。
在地面の「自然」が、ここに存在しているのです。それは、私たちが日常的に利用しているものであり、私たちの生活を支えているものです。自然は、私たちの心を和らげ、心を静かにする力を持っています。自然の美しさは、私たちを癒すことができます。自然への愛と感謝の気持ちを持って、私たちの生活を支えていきましょう。
夢は、現実の世界を変える力を持つ。夢を信じて、夢に向かって進む。夢は、この世の全てを変えうる唯一の力である。
